TRIED & TESTED

I'D HEARD A LOT ABOUT SMART LIPO and was intrigued, as it is supposed to be great for getting rid of pockets of stubborn fat that won't go through dieting or exercise. At my initial consultation the lovely Dr Andre took a full medical history before explaining how the treatment would work. During Smart Lipo, he told me, a laser is used to 'melt' fat away. It's much less invasive than liposuction with less down time – a treatment takes between 30 minutes and two hours.

Dr Andre's calm and friendly manner meant that when I went back for the actual treatment I wasn't in the slightest bit nervous. The doctor first of all made 1mm incisions into my navel into which he inserted an ultra-fine cannula for the anaesthetic. My stomach (my problem area) was soon numb. Next came the laser, which is inserted through the holes into the layer of fat just under the skin – weirdly I could see the light as Dr Andre 'fanned' it around inside me. The heat it produces, he explained, destroys the walls of the fat cells and liquifies the fat within – this is then released into the bloodstream and processed by the liver. The laser also seals off blood vessels, which minimises bleeding and bruising.

DREAMING OF A FLATTER TUMMY FOR THE SUMMER?
SMART LIPO COULD BE THE SECRET OF A LEANER YOU...

The treatment wasn't at all painful, but it was an odd sensation to have something moving around under my skin.

It can take up to 12 weeks for a patient to see full results, the doctor told me, as he performed a light aspiration with water to speed the treatment along.

After the Smart Lipo I was given a cup of tea and put into an 'attractive' corset, which you must wear for at least 10 days after the treatment. I was also prescribed a course of antibiotics as a preventative measure. As the anaesthetic wore off I did feel pretty tender around the treated area but no pain, no gain and I was fine the following morning.

Dr Andrea followed up the Smart Lipo with Accent Radiofrequency remodelling to tighten up the treated areas. He is, he says, delighted with the results, but nowhere near as happy as I am. I'm trimmer and firmer and I can't wait to show off my new figure on the beach this summer. AG
